

America's Museums Trust Smartvue®

The Reynolda House is America's premier museum of American art and home to masterpieces from three centuries of painting and sculpture.

"As a security director for the historic house of R.J. Reynolds, I am faced with many unique and complex challenges in providing protection for all our assets. In our new gallery the layout changes for each exhibition, so I wanted to find a surveillance solution that offered superior quality, reduced the complexity of deployment, and supported camera mobility. Smartvue Corporation with their premium solution met our demanding requirements. With their long range wireless capability, we are able to simply install cameras into our track lighting and point them where we want. The solution automatically configures these IP cameras for operation and recording. When exhibitions change, I can move the cameras as needed to any section of track lighting in the gallery. The cameras also have an attractive design that fits well in our visually demanding environment."

Matthew St. John
Director of Security
Reynolda House Museum of American Art

